"Mormon" Chapel in the Nation's Capital

8A-H470

Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON CHAPEL

The "Mormon" Chapel in Washington, two miles north of the White House at 16th Street and Columbia Road, has architectural distinction and challenges attentive interest.

The only structure in the world built of the attractive Utah "bird's-eye" marble, this significant edifice, surmounted by a gold-sheathed replica of the Angel Moroni on the Salt Lake Temple, contains a chapel, recreation hall, stage, banquet hall, gymnasium, class rooms, baptistery, library, offices and a modern apartment for the resident guide.

Thousands of visitors are attracted to the air-conditioned chapel each year to hear the noble organ in the free evening recitals given by the Organist-Director.

Here's one to add to your collection.
